Table of Content:

Purpose:

The purpose of this Software Testing Report (STR) is to summarize the testing activities conducted on the Decathlon Israel website. The testing was carried out on both desktop and mobile environments to assess the website's functionality, usability, compatibility, and responsiveness. The objective was to detect and document any visual issues, broken flows, or user experience problems in order to ensure a reliable and seamless shopping experience across platforms.
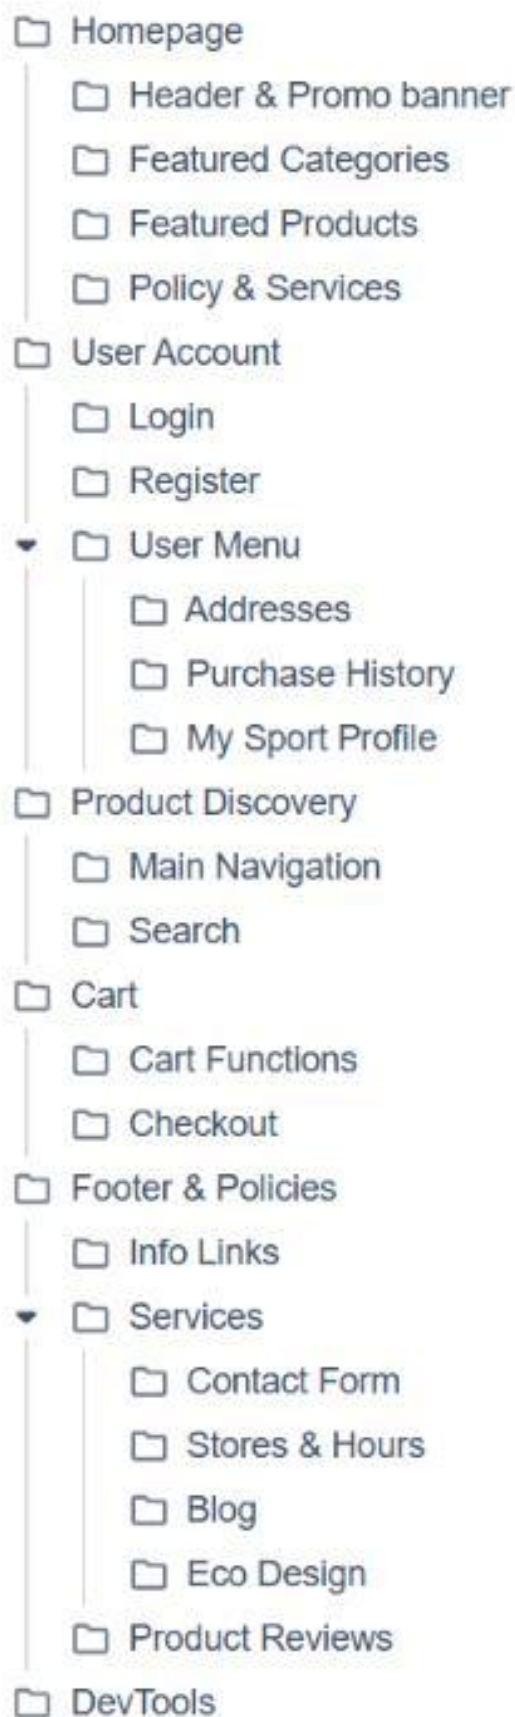

Application Overview:

The Decathlon Israel website is a multilingual e-commerce platform that offers a wide range of sports products including clothing, footwear, and equipment. Users can explore various categories, filter products by sport or demographic, add items to their cart, and complete their purchases. The site supports account management, store location preferences, and promotional offers. Key features include product filtering, user login and registration, dynamic banners, language and currency selection, and cart/checkout functionality. The purpose of the test was to validate that these core functions work smoothly on both mobile and desktop and that the user interface behaves consistently throughout the website.
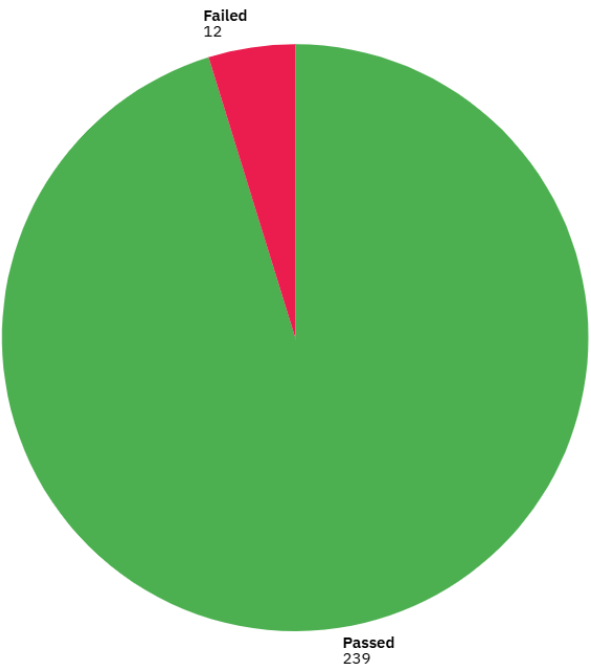

Testing Scope:

The testing scope covers the functionality, usability, and responsiveness of the Decathlon Israel website on both desktop and mobile devices. The main focus areas Include user registration, product browsing and adding items to the cart. Payment transactions, order tracking, Performance testing, security testing and API testing were not included in this test cycle.

Exit Criteria:

The following criteria were established and met for the completion of the testing phase:

- Test Case Execution Completion: All planned test cases were executed, resulting in 251 out of 251 executed test cases.

- Test Case Pass Rate: A high-test case pass rate was achieved, with 239 test cases passing (approx. 95.2%) and 12 test cases failing (approx. 4.8%).

- Defect Triage and Severity Assessment: All identified defects (bugs) have been logged, reviewed, and assigned a severity level.

- No Critical or Major Defects Remaining: No critical or major severity defects remain in an open status. All identified defects were classified as low severity (Cosmetic).

Conclusion:

Based on the comprehensive testing activities conducted for the application, the overall quality of the software is deemed satisfactory for release.

A total of 251 test cases were executed, with an impressive 95.2% passing rate. While 12 defects were identified during the testing phase, a thorough analysis confirmed that all of these defects are of low (Cosmetic) severity. These cosmetic issues primarily relate to minor UI/UX inconsistencies such as pointer behavior, image alignment, text formatting, and incorrect content display in specific sections.

Crucially, no critical or major severity bugs were discovered that would impede core functionality, user experience, or data integrity. The application's primary features and workflows have been validated to be stable and functional.

Recommendation:

Given the high-test case pass rate, the comprehensive test coverage, and the absence of any critical or major severity defects, it is recommended to proceed with the release of the application to the production environment.
The identified low-severity (cosmetic) bugs do not significantly impact the core usability or functionality of the application and can be addressed in subsequent maintenance releases or minor updates without delaying the current deployment. Prioritizing these cosmetic fixes can be planned based on their impact on overall user polish post-release.
